(Top left) Vee Jay Records, which misspelled the famous British band's name "The Beattles" on first editions of their first single, was not the only label that had problems like this. On this rare promo-only single of "Witchcraft," notice the spelling of Marvin Gaye's name! (Top right) Picture discs, on which the entire record, including the playing surface, were far more commonly done on albums than on singles. One 7-inch record that bucked the trend was this 1982 release of the Go-Go's first two hits, "We Got the Beat" and "Our Lips Are Sealed," on the same picture disc. (Bottom left) Even with the reissue of the Jimi Hendrix recording of his Christmas medley in 1999 - the 45 version of which is already a collectible in its own right - this promo sleeve from the first promo-only issue of the material is still a highly sought-after Hendrix item. (Bottom right) Exactly what 45 was contained inside this promo-only picture sleeve, which has the same design as the LP cover for the "Hold On!" soundtrack, is not known. Our best guess is "Leaning on the Lamp Post," but we're not certain. We do know that this is the rarest Herman's Hermits picture sleeve.

(Top left) Many Jan and Dean picture sleeves from their hit-making era are not that hard to find. But "From All Over the World" is a tough one. (Top right) Speaking of tough picture sleeves, this one, from Jay and the Americans' top 20 hit single "Sunday and Me," is pretty obscure as well. The song itself was the first major songwriting success for Neil Diamond. (Bottom left) Elton John's first British single, "I've Been Loving You," was not issued in the U.S. until the CD era. His second one, "Lady Samantha," actually came out twice in the States. The first time was on a short-lived American branch of the British DJM Records in 1969. It had its original U.K. B-side, "All Across the Havens," and is by far the rarest of Elton's regular U.S. 45 issues. The single was later reissued on Congress with a different flip side. (Bottom right) Of all the "cartoon groups" that sprang up in the late 1960s and early 1970s, the most collectible is Josie and the Pussycats. Part of the reason is that one of the singers on the music (though not one of the voices on the TV show) was a pre-Charlie's Angels Cheryl Ladd.

Picture sleeves, or special sleeves that promote the artist on the record within, go back to the days of Enrico Caruso. But not until the introduction of the 45 rpm in 1949 did their use become more common. The introduction of extended-play singles, which came with cardboard covers, made for some attractive sleeves as well. (Top left) The first Decca EP for Bill Haley and His Comets, "Shake, Rattle, and Roll," featured the A and B sides of his first two Decca 45s, one of which was "Rock Around the Clock" ($60). (Top right) One of the rarest of all Elvis Presley picture sleeves came with a special edition of the EP "Elvis Presley." The records inside contained three songs on each side rather than the two on the normal edition. In near-mint condition this sleeve alone can bring $1,500. (Middle left) Buddy Holly's first commercial recordings appeared on the Decca label and flopped. When he became successful, his original label re-released some of that material in this sought-after EP. With liner notes on the back, the cover alone can go for $2,000. (Middle right) Ricky Nelson is probably the most collectible "teen idol," because his music transcends the teen-idol stereotype and stands on its own. One of his earliest sleeves was from the 1958 hit "Stood Up" ($70). (Bottom left) The Champs were a revolving-door group that at various times included Dave Burgess, Chuck Rio, Glen Campbell, Jim Seals and Dash Crofts. Their only EP release was named after their biggest hit, "Tequila" ($150 record, $150 sleeve). (Bottom right) The last chart-topper of the 1950s was "Why" by Frankie Avalon, which came with this sleeve ($30).

When RCA Victor introduced 45s in 1949, it initially color-coded the records by type of music. That experiment was pretty much over by 1951, but ever since, colored vinyl 45s have remained a staple of record collecting. (Top left) The most sought-after of the early RCA colored vinyl singles are the orange (officially "cerise") releases from the "blues and rhythm" series. Here's "Rockin' with Red" by Piano Red. (Top right) Mercury issued some red-vinyl singles in the early 1950s, including this pressing of Patti Page's "Mister and Mississippi." (Bottom left) From 1961, here's an unusual orange-vinyl pressing of Chubby Checker's "Let's Twist Again," one we were not aware of until research started for the third edition of this book. (Bottom right) Early copies of Electric Light Orchestra's 1977 hit "Telephone Line" were on green vinyl.

Some of the neatest, and most sought-after, picture sleeves were released in the 1960s. Here's a sample. (Top left) "I'm Hurtin'," from late 1960, was Roy Orbison's first hit single to have a picture sleeve ($120). (Top right) Gene Pitney's "I Wanna Love My Life Away," his debut single in 1961, had this attractive sleeve of Gene at a piano ($40). (Middle left) Shelley Fabares had a couple hit singles in 1962. "Johnny Loves Me," the follow-up to the chart-topping "Johnny Angel," came with this color sleeve ($120). (Middle right) One of the rarest Beach Boys picture sleeves came with their second Capitol single, 1962's "Ten Little Indians" ($400). (Bottom left) The most valuable Beatles-related stock picture sleeve isn't from a Beatles 45. It's from George Martin's instrumental version of "A Hard Day's Night" on United Artists ($2,000). (Bottom right) This is an American picture sleeve for the Honeycombs' third single on Interphon. Curiously, though the record label has the American spelling of "color," the British spelling, "colour," is on the sleeve ($25).

Some more 1960s picture sleeves: (Top left) The Doors' first single, 1967's "Break On Through," was a flop that didn't even make the Hot 100. The single's relatively hard to find today, but this picture sleeve is even more difficult ($120). (Top right) The Turtles' biggest hit, "Happy Together," came with this somewhat tough sleeve ($40). (Middle left and middle right) Here are both sides of the Beach Boys' rarest picture sleeve, the officially unreleased Capitol 5826 version of "Heroes and Villains." ($400) It was prepared in advance as the first single from the never-issued Smile LP. Only later did the song come out, but on Brother 1001 with a completely different sleeve. (Bottom left) The Seeds are best known for their two-chord gem "Pushin' Too Hard." An earlier song that charted, "Can't Seem to Make You Mine," came with this attractive picture sleeve of Sky Saxon and the gang ($50). (Bottom right) The Holy Grail of all picture sleeves, the Rolling Stones' "Street Fighting Man" ($10,000). By the way, if you have a copy of this with the same picture on both sides, it's a counterfeit. The B-side, "No Expectations," has a completely different photo.

Capitol Records 45s: A Pictorial Chronology

1949-55: Capitol logo at top. Some early singles also exist with maroon, red or yellow labels. Singles from 1949 used a "54" prefix; from 1950 on, an "F."

1956-59: The size of "Capitol" has shrunk considerably.

1960-61: The "Capitol" is even smaller and at the left.

1968-69: Short-lived variation with much smaller print and "A Subsidiary of Capitol Industries" in the fine print.

1969: An even shorter-lived variation with the new "target" label and Capitol logo in an oval at left.

1969-72: "Target" label with new Capitol logo at left. It can be found with or without a white circle in the middle of the logo.

1972-78: Capitol logo moves to bottom. Some records are red with a black logo.

1978-83: A return to the old purple, but with some subtle changes.

1983-88: For the first time, the 1960s album label design gets used on 45s.

1989-91: Purple returns, this time with a much wider label than in 1978-83.

1992-present: "For Jukeboxes Only!" is added to the left of most 45s of this era. Also, some stock singles are issued with white labels.

Here are some more recent picture sleeves, from the late 1970s to the present. Most sleeves from this period bring modest amounts, but there are exceptions. (Top left) The most sought-after 1970s picture sleeve is from the 1978 Rolling Stones single "Beast of Burden" ($2,000). The record itself is common, but few sleeves exist. Like its 1960s counterpart, "Street Fighting Man," this has been counterfeited, but the phonies are a much lighter pink color than the originals, which are lavender. (Top right) Pink Floyd's 1982 single "When the Tigers Broke Free" came in a cardboard, fold-open sleeve with scenes from the movie The Wall ($10). (Middle left) The first U.S. picture sleeve from Madonna is a beauty. "Borderline" folds open into a beautiful poster of the popular singer ($80). (Middle right) Much scarcer than previously suspected is this alternate picture sleeve of Bob Seger's only No. 1 hit single, "Shakedown." Copies with Seger's photo on the title side are common, but the version with Eddie Murphy on the title side isn't ($15). (Bottom left) "Real Love" was one of the two John Lennon demos that the surviving Beatles made into their own. This 1996 single release, obscure on 45, has this beautiful sleeve, which is not that hard to find ($3). (Bottom right) From the holiday season of 1999 came this cardboard picture sleeve of a Jimi Hendrix Christmas medley ($12).

MARATHONS, THE (1)
Two different groups posing as one. After the success of "Peanut Butter" on Arvee, the label hired another group to be The Marathons after losing a legal battle to keep the "real" group, which was really THE VIBRATIONS in disguise. And the Vibrations had formerly been THE JAYHAWKS. Confused yet?

—White vinyl standard issue

(Top left) Not known to exist until recently, here is the promo-only picture sleeve for the Mamas and the Papas' first, unreleased, single, "Go Where You Wanna Go." The record never was issued except as a promotional copy, because the label decided to choose a different song as the first "official" single. (Top right) And that different song was "California Dreamin'." Here's the promo-only picture sleeve for that one, which was a monster hit. Notice that the two are almost identical, except for the song title and the catalog number of the record. (Bottom left) Another curious promo single is from the Marvelettes. This one-sided 1964 white label pressing used the title "Yes He Is," but when the song was issued commercially, the song had become "He's a Good Guy (Yes He Is)." (Bottom right) Before the song was issued to the general public, a different version of the MC5's "Kick Out the Jams," with a different catalog number, was given away to "brothers and sisters of the MC5" at a December 12, 1968 Fillmore East concert.

(Top left) Far more attention is paid to Rick Nelson's Imperial years, as that's when he was having most of his hits. But collectors are finding that the Decca material is just as rewarding — and by comparison, much more difficult to find. Here's a Decca picture sleeve from the 1965 single "Love and Kisses" that was not previously listed in our price guides. (Top right) When it was first issued in 1974, "I Honestly Love You" by Olivia Newton-John did not have a picture sleeve. But a 1976 re-release, in conjunction with a greatest-hits album, did have this picture sleeve. (Bottom left) I wonder how many people, who are probably seeing a photo of The O'Kaysions for the first time on this rare original picture sleeve of "Girl Watcher," thought the group was black? (Bottom right) Another artist with many tough-to-find picture sleeves after his peak of popularity is Roy Orbison. This one has been known to trade in the $100 range.

—Two records have three songs on each side (12 total), as opposed to the two of the standard release

Of all the Elvis Presley singles released commercially by RCA Victor, the greatest demand lies in some odd pressings from the early 1960s. RCA tried to issue both "Living Stereo" 45 rpm singles and "Compact 33" singles that played at the same speed as LPs. Both were colossal failures, and thus any Elvis record in those formats is highly collectible. (Top left) "Stuck on You," his first post-Army single, was issued in "Living Stereo" with a 61 prefix, in addition to the normal release with a 47 prefix. (Top right) RCA introduced the "Compact 33" in 1961 and discontinued them in 1962. The records are rare enough; the custom picture sleeves are even more rare. The first Elvis single to get this treatment was "Surrender." (Bottom left) RCA's next attempt was "Wild in the Country" backed with "I Feel So Bad." (Bottom right) Each later "Compact 33" is harder to find than the one before it. Still tougher than the first two is the third, "His Latest Flame" backed with "Little Sister."
